STUDENT BOOK REVIEW

The Sight

by: David Clement-Davies

The Sight is a tremendous page-turner that will keep you yearning for the next chapter. At 464 pages, the story focuses on the life of a wolf family. The Mother, Palla, has an older sister that possesses The Sight, a gift (or curse, depending on who you ask) that allows her to see through birds eyes. As Palla gives birth to two cubs, they are also blessed with The Sight. Mogra, Palla's sister, comes to ask to join the pack, even though she is know for killing pups. When her request is denied, she sets a curse upon them. Through the year, the pack slowly falls apart. What will happen to the pups, Larka and Fell? Will they defeat Mogra before she unleashes the deadly Searchers to destroy the wolf race? This story is not recommended for those with a weak stomach.

I have always Admired Erin Hunter for 'her' (she is actually four authors combined) simple, yet lovable stories. David Clement-Davies is a close second.

Where do you like to read?

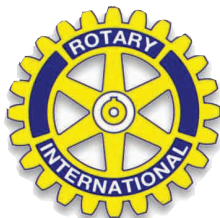

I enjoy reading somewhere quiet, but anywhere will do.

Who inspired you to read?

My second grade teacher, Mrs. Bousek inspired me because she always spoke about the importance of books.

What will you read next?

I will most likely read the sequel, Fell, because I liked this book so much.
